Twenty-First Annual Meeting of Phi Beta Delta Honor Society for International Scholars
March 29-31, 2007, San Antonio, Texas, The Emily Morgan Hotel – River Walk

The Dignity of Difference – Welcome to San Antonio

Internationalization of our daily life is now a latent, if not an active force in our decision-making processes. Our attempts to gain control of this influence may simply make us more aware of the global connectedness of our actions rather than impart more understanding of how to manage these consequences. For example, just as we finally coordinate the daylight saving time dates for conversion among all countries, our lawmakers now have the U.S. changing times almost three weeks ahead of our European, Asian, African, and Latin American Colleagues. While this is a trivial matter to most people, it does affect the rhythm of communications around the globe.

A rhythm of communication is my interest for our 21st Annual Society Meeting. My sincere welcome goes out to all of the participants in this San Antonio Conference. Our Annual Meeting should be a high point for the Society in building personal understandings of different individual and chapter achievements to promote International Education.

As we know more about our diverse methods among the many chapters, I find it more important each year to meet directly with the people who are so creatively managing these efforts within the Society.

The dignity of difference among our chapters and regions should be a meaningful source for informing crucial cultural factors in education today. The Board of Directors will strive this year to help sustain an improved rhythm of communication among chapters and members that recognizes our diverse, regional educational achievements. The Annual Meeting is always a way to begin.

Phi Beta Delta is still the first Honor Society to recognize excellence in International Education across the diversity of all disciplines. Our efforts to include all disciplines have put us in the forefront of expanding Global Thought beyond, for example, the Social/Political Sciences.

I believe that the Society can and should be a voice, locally and internationally for a truly enlightened human commerce of different cultural ideas and values.

Gene Egger, Ph.D.
President of Phi Beta Delta

Society Earns National Honors

The MSU Alpha Alpha Chapter of the Phi Beta Delta International Honor Society was awarded both the 2006 outstanding chapter in the Midwest and outstanding national chapter for its achievements and efforts in programming, chapter growth and expanded outreach within and beyond academic community. The award was presented at the Phi Beta Delta International Studies Association national conference in San Diego on March 23, 2006.

Angelika Kraemer, a Michigan State University graduate student from Germany, was named the David Merchant International Student of the Year 2005!!! The prestigious honor was awarded at the 2005 annual international conference in Washington, D.C. Also, in the late eighties Susan Lufkin was honored as the National Domestic Student of Phi Beta Delta

The chapter has participated in numerous cultural and international activities on campus, including the campus Global Festival, World Language Day and study abroad fairs.

MSU also was the first university chapter to institute a student president. The MSU chapter had one of the largest inductions in the nation in year 2006, adding about 140 new members with commendable international accomplishments including international and domestic students, faculty, and staff.

About MSU Alpha Alpha Chapter

Founded on May 19, 1989 the chapter has since inducted more than three thousand individuals who have demonstrated scholarly achievement and have participated in international activities or programs.
